Alberta 2008 Provincial Election as Analyzed With PRP

A comparison of the first-past-the-post results to PRP results

Dave Brekke and Ted Dean

9/1/2013

A compilation of the results of the 2008 Alberta provincial election compared to the results of PRP electoral system results using the same election data.

Summary

To acquire proportional seats without adding seats, two adjacent ridings were made into one riding with the assistance of Alberta friend, Larry MacKillop. Eight-two ridings became forty-one ridings plus forty one proportional seats. The proportional seats helped reach a closer match between votes of political parties and seats won by them.

Ten electoral areas were established to give relative closeness to proportionally elected MLAs and the voters who helped to elect them. Each electoral area had four, six, eight or ten MLAs, half representing ridings and half representing their electoral area.

For electoral area results, see below. For more on how this system would work and other election results go to www.electoralchange.ca.

The Riding of West Yellowhead is not included in this analysis to allow for an even number of ridings. That riding stays its present size, has preferential voting, but will not be in a proportional electoral area.
